“ From Kelly Oliva Brown's Facebook Page

So yesterday I found out that someone dear to my heart passed away. We had lost touch and reconnected years back but still just did the Christmas card thing. I found out a few months back that she was very sick and knew seeing her was a must during my recent trip to New Jersey. I am so happy that I made that time. My girls got to meet her and we reminisced. I also got to see her son, which I had not seen in 20 plus years. Life is short we never know what tomorrow may bring so take the time when you can to visit and spend time with those you love and hold dear. Do not hold onto to grudges or petty stuff. If someone matters let them know. This pic is from my confirmation, which she was my sponsor for. The little boy is her son who is now 35. RIP Chris...sad you are no longer with us but happy you are no longer suffering.

“ Paul and Justin, I am so sorry for your loss. I will never forget the wonderful times we shared with you. I can see her running to 7-11 for a buttered roll and coffee and sitting in the gazebo in the summer. So many sweet memories. Love you you both and extended family.

“ Chris was a lovely individual and enjoyed entertaining. We will never forget the good times and fun at different Met Life Conventions. Also, of course, all the July 4th gatherings at her home and monthly card games.

Chris...you will be missed.
Peace

Prayers to Paul and Justin
