“ I offer my most sincere condolences to Nick's family and friends. While I did not work with him one-on-one at Marquis Who's Who, I proofread quite a few of his assignments and could tell he had a strong, sophisticated voice in writing, even at such a young age. I hope his writing continues to live on and serves as a testament to his wisdom.

“ I helped coach Nick during his short time at Marquis Who's Who, and I know that with more time his work would have only continued to improve. He was a quirky and interesting guy, and I'll miss his infectiously sweet attitude and desire to help.

It's my hope that his memory lives on through his writing - he deserves that much.

“ Nicholas was truly such a light. I especially remember becoming close with him when I was the Countess and he was the Sultan of Bashir in the Fall comedy ‘Don’t Drink the Water.’ I would force myself not to break character when we were on stage together because Nick was a goofball just like I was. I specifically remember during play practice I’d say to him “please Nicholas, do the roll for me, it’ll cheer me up” and he would smile and do ninja rolls up and down the aisles of the theater and I’d laugh so hard. He was just completely selfless. I always looked out for him because i knew that he was one of the sweetest souls I’ve ever met. Prayers to the Nissen family. You are like my family too. RIP Nicholas.

“ As the managing editor of the Marquis Who's Who editorial team, I have had the privilege of corresponding with Nicholas nearly every day since May. He was a considerate and gentle spirit, who always had a kind word to share. His positivity was infectious and his drive to meet expectations and improve was laudable.

One of the reasons that Nicholas secured a role with Marquis was his unique creative voice. He submitted an assortment of writing samples to be considered for a position and it was clear to me that he had inimitable and thoughtful views on the world — an introspective outlook that I found unusual for someone so young. Although he was taken from this life far too soon, his writing leaves a universal vibration that if not for him, would otherwise not have existed in this world.

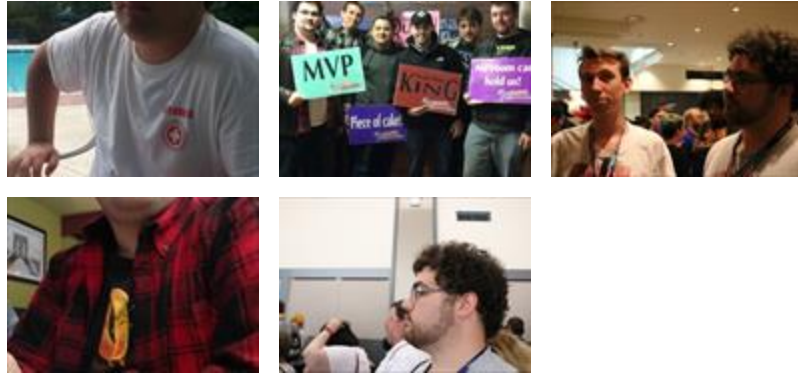

I am so proud to have known Nicholas and connected with him professionally. He will be greatly missed by the Marquis team, and I wish nothing but comfort and healing to his family and loved ones.
