24 of this year.

She is survived by her daughter Phyllis Germano and her husband Bob, her son Anthony and his wife Susan, and her daughter Maria Martemucci and her husband Jimmy and Steve Blashfield, Adrienne's long time companion.

“ Good morning Mother. I'm sure by now, you have reunited with daddy and A. I'm sure they, along with Auntie Roma, were waiting for you with open arms. I have to imagine that A gave daddy a haircut and shave to be sure he didn't scratch your face when he kissed you again for the first time in 2 long years.

While I am so very sad and missing you, I know that you, daddy and A are all together. I know that you are taking care of each other now. You began your "family" when A was born, and as it began here in earth, so it ended here on earth. I know in my heart that A needed you with her, I know daddy was ok with you joining him now, not for him but for A. You and daddy saw her through every trial and tribulation and so that will continue. These things I know to be true.

I love you mom. I will never not miss you, I will never not miss daddy and I will never not miss A. You always said that she and I were like two peas in a pod. When I walked through the door in your house, what did I hear from Daddy before he even said hello - "Where is your sister, why isn't she with you?" Now both of you will know where is at all times...right by your side.

I will try to carry on all of your traditions. Christmas Eve will never be same, but to honor you and daddy we will continue that tradition.... as long as I can manage to not poison the family by not cooking the lobster properly. Easter bread will grace our table each year and Kaeleigh will be my helper for sure. Andy and Kae are so fortunate to have known their great-grandparents. They will always know how much you and daddy loved them.... a priceless gift.

You have completed your job here on earth with true grace mom....more than well done. I am so proud to be your daughter.

*Until we meet again-forever loving you,
Phyllis Ann*
